Description

Welcome to the Isaac Cooper House, also known as Cooper Farm, a remarkable circa-1838 residence listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Situated on approximately 10.15 picturesque acres in Limestone, Tennessee, this beautifully preserved property offers a rare combination of historic significance, timeless architectural character, and peaceful country living.

From the moment you arrive, the setting feels like something out of a storybook. Mature trees, rolling pastures, traditional outbuildings, a charming pond, and inviting outdoor spaces create an atmosphere of warmth and tranquility.

Inside, original architectural details, wide-plank wood floors, beautiful woodwork, and five gas-log fireplaces with new inserts and remotes showcase the craftsmanship of another era. Thoughtful improvements provide modern comfort while preserving the home's historic integrity.

Recent updates include a new HVAC system; a refreshed kitchen featuring new countertops, sink, faucet, appliances; updated lighting, electrical switches and outlets throughout the house, toilets, interior & exterior painting and landscaping. A whole-house water filtration system and reverse-osmosis drinking water system provide additional convenience.

The grounds offer exceptional versatility, whether your vision includes a private country retreat, hobby farm, equestrian property, or simply room to enjoy the beauty of East Tennessee. A spacious six-stall barn with water and electricity, a second barn with water, a pump house, a detached three-car carport with electricity, fenced areas, and a picturesque pond complete this extraordinary property.

Imagine quiet mornings on the porch, peaceful views across the countryside, and the enduring charm of a home that has stood for nearly two centuries.

Rarely does a property offer such a captivating blend of history, acreage, architectural beauty, and modern improvements. Discover the timeless appeal of Cooper Farm!!
